Resilient Villages

15

What challenge or problem are you addressing? What is the need for the project?

The local impact of global socio-economic changes is experienced severely in many villages (for example: disappearing of local shops, ageing population), implying changes in the villages themselves, but also changes in the relationship among villages or between villages and cities. These changes ask for innovative policy- and decision-making processes and tools. This project aims at enlarging the resilience of villages by research, design and testing of innovative tools and models for policymaking (on different government levels: local, regional, national).

Objective of the project:

The goal of this project is to enlarge the resilience and dynamics of (rural) villages by enlarging the adaptive capacity of villages to global socio-economic challenges.

Why do you need transnational cooperation?

We have developed a method, focusing on 13 challenges (social vulnerability, poverty, accessibility, accessible transport, climate change, energy transition, employment opportunities, basic services, loneliness among elderly, care, housing for elderly, administrative power, attracting/keeping youth), which we want to test and explore with other countries.

What kind or partners are you looking for?

- universities/research institutes: R&D of tools and models
- test cases: villages and their different levels of government
- organisations that work 'in the field' in villages, for a participative approach
- Lead Partner
